“ Everyone should be so lucky to have a friend like Tom.
He was smart, fun, outgoing, caring and a host of other admirable qualities.
Over nearly 45 years I enjoyed being friends with Tom.
Trips to PTown, Thursday 8-ball and pinochle nights, interrupted only by Seinfeld, working on his old VW bus, camping on the cape.
When my mother passed, he identified the family antiques for us for the estate sale.
Anyone who ever rode with him would talk about that white knuckle experience, but that was Tom!
His career in special education was full of humorous stories, but always caring.
He never stopped learning how to help those with special needs.
I could go on and on. I read once that death is a magic trick, the ultimate disappearing act. Tom will never disappear from any of us. I can hear his voice saying “hellooooo” (think Seinfeld) when I’d call him. Memories of moments from our time together are already popping up to make me smile. He will always be with me.
Everybody should be so lucky to have a friend like Tom.
Be good

*That was a beautifully written tribute to my Uncle Tom. I was holding back the tears and then I got to the 'white knuckle driving experience' and nearly spit out my tea.
What a character he was and your words described him perfectly. Jody*
